

connect and learn with other virtual school educators

Virtual Schools Network

Every virtual learner deserves high-quality, equitable, personalized learning experiences and VSN creates the opportunities and resources to equip educators and school leaders with what they need to make it happen.

In an effort to identify and support critical needs surrounding various virtual learning environments, the Friday Institute for Educational Innovation, part of the College of Education at NC State University, and North Carolina Virtual Public School (NCVPS) have partnered to develop and implement a Virtual Schools Network (VSN) focused on connecting local traditional virtual/remote public schools.

Not only does this network create the space for educators to learn with and from one another, it offers opportunities for personalized support, professional development, and advocating for the unique needs of educators within virtual public schools across the state of North Carolina.

2024-2025 VSN Offerings

- Two-day VSN Institute for school planning teams across the network
- Quarterly collaborations to tackle your virtual school's problems of practice
- Six synchronous webinars
- Two in-person professional development opportunities designed for virtual school educators
- Assistance in the creation of a summative virtual school report
- Access to research-based materials, curated resources, and customized services
- Opportunities to earn CEUs

Tiered pricing for partnering options available.

Contact J.Stevens | jlbell@ncsu.edu or go to go.ncsu.edu/virtualschoolsnetwork

College of Education
Friday Institute for Educational Innovation